THE ECONOMIC IMPACT OF

The Florida Keys Marathon International Airport (MTH)

MTH

FLORIDA KEYS MARATHON INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT

Florida Keys Marathon International Airport is located in Monroe County just east of the town of Marathon. The airport has one runway that measures 5,008 feet, allowing it to accommodate general aviation aircraft, including business jets. A recently opened U.S. Customs and Border Protection facility allows the airport to accommodate international traffic and has made it a popular entry point to the United States for airplanes arriving from the Caribbean and Central and South America.

The airport primarily supports recreational flying, freight activity, and military training. The airport is the only publicly owned FAR Part 139 airport within a 50 mile radius. The airport is also designed to operate as an “air bridge” to bring in supplies and accommodate evacuations during natural disasters or other emergencies. A repair maintenance shop located at the airport serves local and transient users. The airport is also engaged in the local community, hosting numerous promotional activities and community events.

Previous versions of this Study used different terminology to communicate results. The following terms were updated: Direct Impacts changed to On-Airport Impacts and Indirect Impacts changed to Visitor Spending Impacts.

Florida's Statewide Benefits From Aviation

Florida realizes significant economic benefits from aviation. The Florida Department of Transportation completed a comprehensive economic impact analysis to measure these benefits. Benefits measured in the FDOT study considered on-airport impacts, visitor spending impacts, and multiplier impacts.

Florida's 129 public-use airports (including 20 commercial service facilities) are a major economic engine of the State's economy. The aviation system keeps Florida connected to the global marketplace while simultaneously driving local economies. Florida's airports provide space and infrastructure for important activities such as manufacturing, logistics, tourism, and emergency response. Below is a summary of the total statewide economic impact as well as the impact of District 6.
